OFFICIAL CALL

For a Republican State Convention to Nominate a State Ticket.

At a meeting of the Republican State Central Committee, held at the city of Parkersburg, February 23, 1892, it was ordered that a convention of the Republican party of West Virginia be held in the city of Huntington, in the county of Cabell, on Wednesday, August 3, A. D. 1892, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., to nominate candidates for the following named offices, to be voted for at the election to be held on Tuesday, November 3, 1892:

Governor, State Superintendent of Schools, Auditor, Treasurer, Attorney-General, two Judges of the Supreme Court of Appeals (one for the short term and one for the long term), and also two Presidential Electors at Large, and to transact such other business as the Convention may see proper to do.

It is recommended that each county be entitled to one vote in said convention for each 100 voters, or fraction thereof in excess of fifty votes, cast for President Harrison in 1888.

The Executive Committee of each county will please take early steps to secure to its county proper representation in said convention.

The co-operation of all voters is invited who believe in the policy of reciprocity, of protection to American working men, American farmers, and American manufacturers, who favor a sound currency, the upbuilding and development of the State, the correction of abuses in the educational, humane and other institutions, of the commonwealth, and economy and reform in the conduct of several departments of the government of the State.

A British View of the American Tariff.

Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

"The promoters of the McKinley tariff meant it to push forward the policy of America for the Americans. One method of realizing it was to keep all work within their own dominions. The country was to be made self-sufficient; what could be produced at home was not to be bought abroad. That was the key-note of the McKinley scheme, and it is working out the idea of its designers with the precision and effectiveness of a machine."

REPUBLICAN victory in the coming

election would retard for a long time the progress of the sound commercial doctrines that underlie the commercial greatness of Great Britain and alone maintain British ascendancy.—London Evening News.

IN 1890 it was a conflict of predictions; now our adversaries must face trade statistics and prices current.—President Harrison, June 21, 1892.

Drive Them From the Country.

When Most heard of the attempt to murder Mr. Frick he rejoiced aloud and was exceedingly glad, remarking that Berkman was a brave lad and that things are quickly coming around the anarchist way.

Everybody knows who and what Most is, what his aims are and what he would do if he had a chance. Driven out of his own country he came here to preach the doctrine of destruction.

Ours is an imbecile government to the last degree it cannot protect itself against avowed murderers. There should be a provision of law that would lay hands on Most and his kind and send them back to their respective countries.

If we can defend ourselves in time of war by warlike methods, we can defend ourselves in time of peace by peaceful methods.

To say that there is no way to reach the Berkman stripe of murderers before they kill somebody or blow up a city, is to say that what we call a government is a delusion, and must depend on chance for its life from day to day.

We Americans want something more solid and more secure than this.

A Blaine Man Resigns.

"Joe" Manley, of Maine, intimate friend and trusted right bower of Mr. Blaine, was so disgusted with the nomination of Harrison that he was going to "die down" and let the campaign take care of itself. Likely enough he would resign from the national committee.

Mr. Manley has resigned, but it is from the Augusta postoffice, not the national committee. In tendering his resignation to the President he says he got out of the postoffice in order to devote his time exclusively to the Republican national committee.

The rattled-brained prophets didn't know "Joe" Manley. When he can't have his way he goes the other way. When the Republican party gives the command Brother Manley takes his place in the line and "keeps step to the music of the Union." The state of Blaine is all right.

Who Inspired the Shot?

From all that is known of the man who shot Mr. Frick it is possible to trace the inception of his act to the influence of a certain New York newspaper. That paper has waged a bitter and unprincipled war on Mr. Carnegie for years. It has thundered against capital and in a demagogic spirit assumed to be the particular guardian of the workman.

It has warred against capital, not because it believed that it was right, or the position it held was honest, but from mercenary motives. It has warred against Mr. Carnegie, not only because he was a capitalist, but because he is a Republican. It has been vicious in its social as well as in its political teachings.

Ever since the troubles at Homestead have engaged public attention its course has been to inflame the passions of the workmen. In its attacks on capital and Mr. Carnegie it has not impaired the one or injured the other; and in its advocacy of the strikers' attitude it has not benefited their cause. Its professed sympathy for the "down-trodden" workman has been of the Uria Heep type, and as insincere.

No doubt the assassin of Mr. Frick has been a close student in the school of its teachings, which has almost, if not quite, touched the borderland of anarchy. Its daily task has been to stir up strife and foster resentment. It must be a peculiar mind indeed that can take pride in the results of the course of this paper.

Real, open generous, sympathy with the toils and troubles of the workman has always been extended by every decent and reputable journal in the land; but at the same time there has been no occasion to berate capitalists and inveigh against capital. This class of papers in advising workmen have been sincere in it. But this inflammatory journal is really seeking to make the men their own destroyers. Its course has not only been un-American but uncivilized.

The paper referred to is the New York World.

The Colored Man in Politics.

Following the Register's publication purporting to give the remarks of Prof. J. McHenry Jones, principal of the Lincoln school, of this city, the INTELLIGENCER endeavored to get in communication with Prof. Jones.

The language attributed to him was so unlike the man that the INTELLIGENCER thought he had been misrepresented. Mr. Jones speaks for himself in to-day's INTELLIGENCER. He is known in this community to be a man of character, and what he says will be believed. He knocks the life out of the Register's jubilant article. So much for that.

It occurs to the INTELLIGENCER to remark that the Register, like other Democratic newspapers, thinks the colored man is all right as an independent voter, by which is meant a voter who does not vote the Republican ticket. As a Republican voter the colored man is all wrong, and any measure to afford him the opportunity to vote as he pleases and to have his vote counted as he cast it, is a "force bill" threatening the country with all the horrors of "negro domination."

If the colored man will promise to vote the Democratic ticket, the Democratic party will make no objection to his race or his color or anything that goes with him. In witness thereof observe how the stray Democratic or "independent" colored man is pelted by the Democratic politician where ever and when ever he turns up. The difference is not in the man; it is in the ticket he votes.

Sacred Art in Politics.

Mrs. Cleveland has just had fifteen photographic negatives taken of her comely self. The pictures are to be of various sizes to suit purchasers. Presently the shop windows will blossom with them.

Only the other day Mr. Cleveland declined to allow the use of his wife's name by a political organization because it is a "name now sacred in the home circle."

Are the face and form less sacred in the home circle than the name? Or has Mr. Cleveland begun to take a different view of the exigencies of his campaign since he wrote that manly letter about the Frances Cleveland clubs?

The suggestion that the name was to produce no royalty and that the photographs will, is unworthy of a man who has been the chief magistrate of a great people.

Swept Away Without Warning.

The disaster in Long run, Marshall county, by which at least six human beings were suddenly swept away, recalls similar casualties in recent years in Caldwell's run and Wheeling creek. The water came down in great volume without warning, and by the time the awful situation was realized the work of destruction had been done.

The lesson is that people should not build their homes so near the banks of these treacherous streams, but until the catastrophe comes it is supposed that it never will come, and the warning of such occurrences as this is not heeded.

ADLAI promising Illinois is reminded that he will do well to make sure of holding his native state of Kentucky. There is something in this.

CARL SCHURZ is said to be writing one or two great campaign speeches which he will commit to memory. What has

Mr. Cleveland promised him? Schurz never lets go something for nothing. When he was a Republican he used to talk for $500 a talk. In 1876 a cabinet seat had to be thrown in with the ready money.

PATTI is coming over for a "positive farewell tour." Her manager is authorized to make this announcement, which she will follow up with an autograph letter. And our children's children shall wonder whether there ever was any of the good, the true and the beautiful in these operatic artists.

It is noticed that Mr. Cleveland is not noticing civil service reform this year. Is this an admission that in this regard Republican administration leaves nothing to be desired? Why, in that elder day to be a civil service reformer—with a wink and a smile—was better than to be a Mugwump.

HERB BLATZ, Herr Johann Most's bookkeeper, says of the assassin of Mr. Frick, "he will never remain long in one place." Won't he? He will remain long enough in the eastern penitentiary of Pennsylvania to know the fine points of that institution.

From the unrestrained gush of his champions it is to be inferred that Stephen Grover Cleveland is his party's thirty-nine articles of faith. What if the fate of Enoch should suddenly overtake the good man!

GROVER and ADLAI making the frolicsome round of ten photographers and posing a dozen times before each, warrants the grim suspicion that they are about to appear as the Great American Skirt-Dancers.

A READER asks for the best advice the INTELLIGENCER can give "a young man who has just left college." Keep cool.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

A new and most important element in the recent British elections was the strength and influence of the "cyclist" vote. The Bicycle Touring club, which numbers 20,000 members, with officers in every town and village, put forth strenuous efforts to obtain from each parliamentary candidate a pledge to vote in favor of making the carrying of lights by all vehicles at night compulsory. Many a close contest was decided on this point, for there are half a million riders of bicycles in the United Kingdom.

An Egyptian scythe, dug up on the banks of the Nile in 1890, and said to be as old as Moses, is exhibited among the antiquities in the private museum of Flinders Petrie, London. The shaft of the instrument is of wood set with a row of fine flint saws, which are securely cemented in a groove. This discovery answers the oft-asked question: How did the stone-age man harvest his crops?

In the German artillery they have tried a trap or three-legged ladder of steel tubing, for enabling the captain of a battery to survey the enemy and direct the firing. The trap is erected in the body of a wagon and the officer climbs to the top with his field glasses to reconnoiter. The tubes are pointed and the tops can be dismantled and packed in half a minute.

The beautiful enameled cup of Charles VI, of France has been acquired by the British museum at the expense not only of the nation, but of several subscribers, who generously made up the necessary sum for the purchase. The cup was presented by James I, of England, to the constable of Castile in 1640.

Asphalt it often found combined with limestone—a very curious mixture of the vegetable and the mineral. It is believed that this has been brought about by hot vapors from decomposing vegetable bogs passing through the porous rock and leaving the bitumen behind.

An East Boothbay (Me.) man is engaged in supplying New York and New Jersey summer resorts with seals, which are very plentiful along the Maine coast. These seals do very well for seashore attractions, being objects of unfailing interest to the summer visitors.

The earl of Airlie has sold his estate of Clunie, in Perthshire, for $70,000 to Mr. Cox, of Shingon. The property includes the Loch of Clunie, in the centre of which is an island, said to have been the birthplace of the Admirable Crichton.

A Safe Guess.

Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette.

Wheeling Democratic primaries indicate the renomination of Congressman Pendleton, but Capt. B. B. Dovenor will be the next representative from that district.

THE only reason for Mr. Cleveland's nomination, and the thing that forced his nomination in spite of all the efforts of politicians, was the fact that, in the minds of the Democratic masses, he represents the idea of free trade. The platform is an unmistakable declaration against all parleying with protection. It puts the Democratic party in the field as committed to the policy of sweeping away every shred of a protective duty.—Henry George, the Free Trader.

AN INDEPENDENT VIEW.

Harrison Stronger in New York and Cleveland Weaker Than in 1888—New York Settles It.

Col. John A. Cockrell in New York Herald.

I believe the odds to be slightly in favor of Harrison now, but there is a hard fight ahead. The bad Democratic legislation of last winter and a sharp contest on the tariff issue ought to produce Republican gains in the interior. I do not see how the Democrats can expect to do better in New York and Kings county than they did four years ago. The Republicans are certain to lose at least four electors under the new election system in Michigan, and there is danger that the crazy silver state of Nevada will slip away. At the same time the People's party has a chance of drawing North Carolina out of the Democratic column.

Of the party managers, Carter and Harrity, I believe the former to be the best equipped. All agree that Carter is a clear headed, shrewd, energetic man. He made himself felt at Minneapolis. The labor troubles at Homestead will be adjusted within a few weeks, I believe, and the Democratic party will not be able to draw comfort from that source. The great railway strikes and riots of 1877 were laid at the door of our protective system, but peace soon followed, and the Republicans elected Garfield, their candidate for president, in 1880. I do not believe that the people of the United States are ready to abandon the present economic system, and that is what Mr. Cleveland's party emphatically demands shall be done.

When Mr. Harrison writes his formal letter of acceptance I believe that he will effectually dispose of the force bill issue, which Mr. Cleveland is endeavoring so strenuously to put to the front. The apprehensions of the southern states and Northern demagogues will be allayed. The presidential situation at this time may be summed up thus:—Mr. Cleveland is not as strong in the state of New York as he was four years ago; Mr. Harrison is stronger, and the business interests of the country will sustain him. As goes New York, so goes the presidency.
